MAKING MUMMIES.

The Curious Secret Held by an Old West Virginia Mountaineer.

Three miles over the mountains from Philippi, W. Va., is the house of G. W. a watering place in January. The Seweather-boarded, but not painted, yet and human beings. Here are mummies wrapped the clay shell that was left in bandaging, saturated with oils and ointments

In this house lie the bodies of two adults, natural almost as in life, every particle of skin exposed to the air, black blood stands out as clear and natural as when these people lived and walked and knew the passions and emotions of being.

The finger and toe nails show the pink flesh of life, and on the cheek of one who died of consumption the scarlet mark of that disease remains clear and distinct. For two years, exposed to the air, without decay or odor, these bodies have lain in this man's house just above his bedroom. His process is a discovery of his own, but it is so simple, he says, that a boy of fifteen, after a single lesson, can do the work as effectually as the inventor himself. The rooms of Mr. Hamrick are miniature museums. In the door that leads to his bedroom a large white cat sits on guard, its tongue, undecayed, lolling up as if it were about to lap milk. For four years that cat has been the sole guard of that lonesome door. On a mantel, in attitude of listening, is a young Rabbits, pigs, squirrels, chickens and even a calf are to be seen, all as natural as in life, and all preserved by this wonderful secret. Mr. Hamrick claims that in an hour he can prepare a body without making any incision of any sort or emoving any part of the body, so that it may be taken around the world with-out ice or arsenical fluids. These two bodies which lie in modest state in his numble house have turned parchment color with the hurrying of time, and the eves have become much sunken.

There was no odor, no pulling up of the flesh. The gnastly look is wanting and one almost feels that it is not the solidified clay of some loved one, but a wonderful likeness caused by a divine sculptor from some rare wood. Think of sleeping with these dead and petrified bodies. But this is not all that this old wonder-worker of the mountain does. He can stop decay at any point. Cures ulcers of long standing by an external application of this discovery. By the same process he keeps fresh, withoutice, salt or brine, all his meat, butter and eggs, and does the same thing for his neighbors. Fruit of all sorts, vegetables, etc., are kept just as easily with-out decay, and watermelons, strawberies and peaches and cream are now assured for the Christmas dinner.

Mr. Hamrick has made little or effort to put forth his process, which such learned men as Drs. Cilley and Freeman, of this city; White, of Washington; Doremus, of New York, and Hordesley, of Wheeling, W. Va., pronounce one of the greatest discoveries of the age, far ahead of what the Egyptians knew. Indeed, Hamrick seems to regard it rather as a curious experiment
